Conservation Conversation Focuses on Backyard Forestry

FLEMINGTON (March 28, 2019) – Get great tips and share your ideas for caring for trees in your yard at the Hunterdon Land Trust’s next Conservation Conversation on Wednesday, April 17 at 5:30 p.m.

This backyard forestry program will focus on tree care issues, including confronting the emerald ash borer, and management programs with special guest Pam Zipse, outreach coordinator for the Rutgers University Urban Forestry Program. It will be held in the Dvoor Farm’s wagon house at 111 Mine St., Flemington.

Conservation Conversations are peer-to-peer learning opportunities -- not lectures. Everyone is encouraged to participate in an active discussion on thought-provoking topics while meeting others who share your interests. Future Conservation Conversations will discuss cycling on June 6 and local food on Sept. 12. Both are at 5:30 p.m.

This event is free and open to all, but please register in advance by emailing judy@hunterdonlandtrust.org or calling 908-237-4582. Light refreshments will be served.

Conservation Conversations are supported by a grant from The Tyler Foundation.
