Dvoor Farm Bird Walk Is May 5; Farmers' Market Open

FLEMINGTON – Explore the bird habitat of the Hunterdon Land Trust's Dvoor Farm on Sunday, May 5 at 8 a.m.

Juanita Hummel, of the Washington Crossing Audubon Society, will lead this hour-long bird walk. She'll stop at several habitat sites and discuss why their preservation was vital for birds and other wildlife. The farm is located at 111 Mine St. in Flemington.

Red-tailed hawks, yellow-bellied sapsuckers are among the dozens of species spotted on the farm in previous walks.

Hummel, an avid birder and nature lover, currently serves on the board of the Washington Crossing Audubon Society, and volunteers with the NJ Audubon Society, the Wildlife Conservation Corps and other conservation organizations.

Future bird walks on the Dvoor Farm are planned for June 23 and Aug. 11, both at 8:30 a.m.

Later that morning, HLT's producers'-only Farmers' Market will be open from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. featuring about a dozen local farmers and vendors with organic produce, pork, fresh-baked bread, honey, locally roasted coffee, seafood, garlic, vegan burgers and more.

Hunterdon Land Trust has preserved more than 9,500 acres since forming in 1996. Its mission is to preserve the integrity of the rural landscapes in the Hunterdon County region by protecting and
